

SECURITIES CLASS ACTION DISCLOSURE

Securities class action lawsuits are cases brought against publicly traded companies on behalf of people who own or previously owned their stock (“shareholders”). These lawsuits often arise because a group of shareholders suffered an economic loss in a particular stock as a result of an alleged fraud or other violation of federal or state securities law. Shareholders are invited to participate in the lawsuit by filing a claim to receive their share of the settlement.

Gilder Gagnon Howe & Co. LLC (“GGHC”) has hired an independent service provider to file class action claims on behalf of our advisory clients’ (discretionary accounts only). As an advisory client, you will receive the same payment you would have received if you filed the claim yourself.

Because GGHC handles the filing for you, you do not need to fill out or mail any claim forms, make phone calls or send emails to request confirmations. You may still receive class action notices from claims administrators, but you need not reply to them or mail in a claim form.

Please note that using this service will not speed up the payment process; class action claims often take more than two years to resolve. This service also does not guarantee that you will receive money from any given class action. To file claims, GGHC provides your name, address, GGHC account number and transaction details to our service provider. Your personal information remains protected as stated in GGHC’s Privacy Policy.

Any settlement payments will be sent directly to National Financial Services to be deposited into your GGHC account. If your account is closed, the settlement payment will be mailed by check to the most recent address GGHC has on file for you.